Essential Lighting Defined: Lights which are used to identify a location or place, to illuminate an area for public circulation, and for public safety or security purposes, such as entrances to buildings, parking areas and access ways.

Non-essential Lighting Defined: Lighting which would not impair the safety nor materially interfere with the occupancy of an area if it were turned off. Examples: decorative; advertising, except simple identification of structures or addresses; and multiple lamp groupings resulting in illumination levels greater than accepted standards for the purpose (as for aisles, corridors, streets, and highways).
